

Regardless of whatever people find indecent or too violent on television, the key is that no one has to watch it. Why does our government have to regulate what is on television, when we the people have the ultimate control over what is played? If we don't want to look at it, we can turn it off, or change the channel. There is not an unacceptable level of violence or obscenity on television - we have some of the harshest restrictions on what can be viewed on tv of any first world nation. It should be well understood that if you don't like what you see, then turn it off. If you start to feel like no matter when the tv is on it represents acts you don't want to see, then - and this is a radical notion - keep the tv off and try reading a book, going outside and working off the lovehandles, or volunteer with a group in your area. Television is not necessary to life. Let the people decide what they want to watch themselves, don't place the morality of a few on the masses.
